

Flavor

Detection and preference are personal and unique to each individual, and are continually modified by experience and circumstance. As you identify what you detect, you can begin to piece together what interactions (interplay of triangle characteristics) are occurring.

